DEAR NEIGHBORS,

DUST OFF THOSE BACKPACKS...

And fill them up! A brand-new school year is upon us! Preparing our kiddos for a new year of school includes more than just fighting the crowds to purchase new pencils and notebooks – it's also a time for us to prepare them for new friendships, teachers and routines.

Whether you can't wait until your kids are back in school or dread the more regimented days that lie ahead, there's one thing we can all count on: Back to School is always a big transition and there are ways you can help to ease the minds of your kids during this time. Make sure your child is familiar with the school, take advantage of any orientation opportunities, facilitate their bonding with the teacher and other kids, get them back on track with an early bed schedule well before school starts and start having conversations about beginning school, especially if they are advancing into a new school or grade level, such as middle school.

This month we have the honor of featuring the Hollingers, a family of six whose story will keep you smiling from ear to ear! Just in time for back to school month, Auri shares her passion for Montessori education, as the Assistant Director at Millhopper Montessori School, and why it has changed the lives of her entire family.

Gainesville Neighbors has so many exciting things in store for the upcoming months and we can't wait to share even more incredible stories of your neighbors. If you haven't already, be sure to like our Facebook page for sneak peeks and updates throughout the month!

MEET THE HOLLINGER FAMILY

WALK IN THE FAITH AND REJECT FEAR

It may have taken them three years of being broken up after dating the first time to realize it, but there is no denying that Auri and Jarius (aka “J”) were meant to be together, raising a family just as fun-loving and full of life as they are.

While attending college in Tallahassee, the two met in 2002 through a mutual friend which also happened to be J’s Godmother. They dated for a while, broke up, and then reunited upon J finding Auri while she was living in Jacksonville after college. “He couldn’t get over me,” Auri laughed. That following December, they were married at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Downtown Gainesville. Almost 14 years of marriage in, and there is no denying their decision to giving dating a second chance was the best one they ever made.

By Christina Chittenden | Photos by Tall Guy & Co Photography

Today, the Hollingers are a party of six. After having two sons, Regan (11) and Caden (9), they knew they wanted to try for a girl. Much to their surprise, the Lord blessed them with not one – but two – beautiful daughters, Kennedy (5) and Rhilynn (4) in the years to follow.

J and Auri both attended Florida A & M University in Tallahassee, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts in Business Administration and she earned a Bachelor of Arts in English Education. Later, Auri went on to earn her Master of Science degree in Educational Leadership from Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale. She plans to soon pursue a Doctor of Education in Montessori Studies to further her education.

When he was in high school, J actually began a career in banking, as his school was the first to establish a fully-run bank inside of a high school. He was able to work there as the Student Manager and then, after graduating, transitioned into a fulltime position while he was attending college. After college, he was offered a position with Stock Building Supply where he was the first Credit Manager for the state of Florida. It was the crash of the housing market that initiated his career change into sales, where he has been ever since. Today, he is an Agency Processing Specialist for Allstate Insurance. "My career is phenomenal," said Jarius. "I love having the ability to teach new people coming into Allstate about sales and the process of selling as well as successful processes and procedures that have been created and established throughout the company. It's great to meet new people and form new relationships on a regular basis."

Auri's first job out of college was a Guest Service Manager for Target Stores in Jacksonville. She then explored the field of education for several years, teaching elementary school, being a School Resource Teacher and then a principal for Magnolia Montessori Academy. Just before they moved to Gainesville, she met Christina Miller at Millhopper Montessori School, and there was no question about where she wanted her next position to be. She now serves as the school's Assistant Director.

Montessori was a style of teaching that she discovered in 2011, after enrolling her oldest son into a Montessori school in Lakeland. "I was in awe of how focused and independent the students were during their work cycle," said Auri. "After completing my formal training in Montessori, I became truly passionate about this method of education because it develops students who are capable, accountable and knowledgeable people who have the strong sense of self they will need to thrive in the real world." Auri feels blessed to work at the same school her children attend. "Being able to be a mom and administrator at the same time, it's really the best of both worlds. Our school's family atmosphere coupled with a rigorous educational program makes it so unique."

Though Auri spent several years of her childhood in Gainesville, J is originally from a small town right outside of Tallahassee. They resided in Lakeland as a family until almost three years ago when they decided to move back to Gainesville to be closer to family.

When it comes to hobbies, Auri and J's tastes are different in that he is an outdoor enthusiast, while Auri is...not so much. During their trip to Blue Springs, Auri's apprehension didn't stop her from enjoying time with the family though. "I got in the water because they encouraged me to participate," she laughed. "I guess I will do it again." Theme parks, particularly Disney, are a definite favorite of theirs, too. The family also loves to explore new places, especially those rich in history. They can also both agree there is a mutual love for food and trying all kinds of new types. The Hollingers are avid Gator and Rattler fans. They do seem to disagree on pro basketball teams, however, as J is a Los Angeles Lakers fan while she favors the Boston Celtics. Basketball season becomes quite competitive for the couple.

Auri enjoys volunteering with the local chapter of her sorority, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. where she has the opportunity to mentor high school students, provide school supplies, clothes and shoes to students in need and award academic scholarships to deserving students. J loves to spend time volunteering with youth as well, and has served in youth ministry at their church where they were able to feed the homeless community at Grace Marketplace, provide clothes and back to school backpacks for the East Gainesville community and also make monthly visits to the local nursing homes. "Anything that involves education and advocating for children is our passion," she said.

It's no surprise that each of their children are also very active and involved in their own hobbies. Regan is a basketball enthusiast and plays for the City of Gainesville Basketball League. He also plays soccer, enjoys reading his Bible and learning new things. He hopes to one day become an engineer. Caden has an interest in a variety of sports, but seems to really enjoy playing soccer with his school's soccer team. He also enjoys building things with Legos and is a science buff. He knows everything as it relates to science, especially Zoology. In fact, he aspires to one day be a scientist.

As for their girls, Kennedy loves gymnastics and has a gift in the music area. She loves to sing and play a variety of instruments and plans to become a teacher when she grows up. Rhilynn, affectionately known as "Rhi Rhi," loves to cook. She enjoys watching different recipes on YouTube Kids and cooking in the kitchen with mommy and daddy. She also loves gymnastics and imaginative play. Her hope is to one day be a doctor. "The kids are natural learners, I attribute that to their Montessori education," said Auri.

For the Hollingers, family time isn't just important - their lives revolve around making every minute together count. While they have carried on traditions from each of their families, Auri and J have also incorporated many of their own. From frequent family days and trips, to their weekly family meetings spent praying and discussing life (and even voting on house rules), they are always happier when they're together.

"Having a large family can be tricky, but we realize our children are not just siblings, but are also individuals," said Auri. "Sometimes we like to take one at a time to go on an outing or have alone time with each one of them to get them to open up and talk to us. We think we know our children, but it's eye opening when they are by themselves. These opportunities really help us to be better parents and enable us to find ways to encourage them. We always want them to remember when they get older, that they had a happy childhood full of laughter and warmth."

SHAKING OFF THE SUMMER

PREPARING YOUR KIDS FOR THE UPCOMING SCHOOL YEAR

By Christina Miller, President/teacher, Millhopper Montessori School, Inc.

Summertime can afford children the opportunity to sleep, play and blissfully run amuck. Even if a child is enrolled in a summer camp or traveling, his or her routine is changed, allowing for a much-needed respite. During the summer, children become recharged (teachers, too). I always look forward to a new school year. There is a visceral reaction to a new cycle beginning, and those returning are eager to identify themselves as students in the next grade up. Those beginning school for the first time are heading into a brand new territory full of anticipation and sometimes separation anxiety. Even older students can feel anxious when entering a new class or a new school. Separating from parents can be very emotional for young children entering school for the first time. It can be difficult for the parents, too. I have found that a quick and happy goodbye is the best plan, even if you have to put on an Oscar-winning performance. If you, as a parent, look worried or distraught, imagine how a small child will interpret that. Sometimes a child will enter the class without trepidation but will begin to cry and cling during the second week of school. This is also normal, as he or she is evaluating and testing to see how much control can be gained over the new routine. Reassure your child, and tell him that each day will get easier. It will. Don't be surprised if, before long, your child doesn't want to leave when you come to pick him up. The best thing to prepare children for school, regardless of whether or not it is a new experience, is to make sure they get enough sleep and have time for a relaxed and nutritious breakfast. We all know how difficult it is to concentrate and monitor our own behavior if we are sleep deprived or our blood sugar is low. Children, especially young children, cannot reason through these experiences. They just have bad days, storing them in their memories, assuming and forming lasting impressions of school. Remember that routines are comforting to children. If a child spends part of the week with Mom and part with Dad, as is often the case with divorced parents, it is vital that both parents come to an agreement on routines regarding homework, bedtime and behavioral expectations. Children need to see their parents as a unified front. And they need to see their parents and teachers as a unified front, too. Since class will soon be in session, check out these websites for a few tips: www.amazingmoms.com (a great resource for back to school ideas); www.familyeducation.com (Back to school transitions: Tips for Parents by Ted Feinberg and Katherine C. Cowan). Peruse and enjoy them. And here's wishing all of you a great and memorable school year!

KEVIN

Owned by Jen and Matthew Doty in Town of Tioga

Kevin is a reverse brindle boxer, so his coloring looks black and white. He loves everyone, and when he gets excited to greet someone, often his whole body will wiggle in excitement! If you meet us out for a walk, we often ask if Kevin can say stop and say "hi". He's working on learning how to stay calm around other dogs - please be patient with him while we distract him with noise. He's got a few puppy pals and loves to play chase with them. You can follow him on Instagram--@kevin_the_boxer.

H2O-PROS PRESSURE WASHING

Providing only the best service for your home or business

By Christina Chittenden

Getting the greatest lifespan from your home or company's roof wouldn't be possible without a thorough roof cleaning performed every few years. The dilemma is that most people are either unaware of the fact that their roof can and needs to be cleaned or they have the notion that roof cleaning is too much of a costly investment. Thankfully, though, roof cleaning is actually extremely economical when you use the team at H2O-Pros Pressure Washing, LLC.

H2O-Pros specializes in roof and exterior home and business cleaning. Owner Kevin Mizell, has been in business for four years. Being aware of the need for great customer service and quality work in the industry, Kevin knew that providing his compassion, skills and knowledge to the area would be a great way to give residents in Gainesville the high quality of service that they deserved.

Serving both residential and commercial roofs, H2O-Pros conducts quite an extensive amount of business with HOAs, realtors with homes that are getting ready to go on the market and property managers.

"What I love most about my job is the 'before and after,'" Kevin said. "I enjoy turning old into new and dirty to clean." One of his favorite aspects of his work are getting homes ready for the market and seeing how much the asking price increases. "The instant gratification for myself and my clients is very rewarding."

Roof cleaning has been an ongoing educational process for Kevin. "Getting people to understand that, in most cases, they don't actually need a new roof they just need a clean roof, has been a tough concept to explain," he said. "Many people buy a new roof way before they need it when they could have simply had a little bit of proactive upkeep, they can get the full lifetime of their roof which is really the ultimate goal."

Kevin grew up in St. Petersburg, Florida where his father, Hubert Mizell, was the lead sports writer for 27 years. He covered the Florida Gators for over 50 years and was the best in the business. Kevin then moved here from Dallas, Texas, where he handled sponsorships for NASCAR, to be closer to his father who had become ill. Unfortunately, his father passed away a couple of years ago and Kevin decided to make Gainesville his home in order to be closer to his family. "My father was my biggest inspiration in life," said Kevin.

At the same time, Kevin recognized a need for an exterior cleaning company geared towards the higher end clientele with a focus on roof cleaning. "Moving here and not possessing a PhD or degree, I knew I needed to start my own business. "Pressure washing has always been viewed as a flighty industry, so I wanted to create a higher level of accountability and service that had previously not been available," he added.

H2O-Pros is more than just a premier roof cleaning business, but they also believe in giving back to the community that supports them continuously. "We are always looking for churches and nonprofits that might not have the means to have exterior cleaning done for their building or facility," said Kevin.

"One big part of the educational process is getting clients past the stigma of pressure washing being us just 'blasting away' at stuff," Kevin said. "Realistically, the only thing we really use pressure on is the flat work like walkways and driveways - everything else is actually a low-pressure soft wash."

Kevin is excited to unleash his up and coming Annual Protection Program that will make his clients' lives so much easier. Essentially, clients will know who is coming out, when they are coming out and what exactly needs to be done - it's like having your exterior cleaning on cruise control! These customizable packages will be based on one set, hassle-free monthly fee.

"The algae problem isn't going away here," added Kevin. "The only way that people are going to see their roofs last through the average lifespan of about 20-25 years is if they are proactive."

"We always go above and beyond, more than just doing the best job that we can do - we usually do more than is required to ensure that the property is in the best shape that it can be," said Kevin. "Whether it be trimming trees from a roof we just go ahead and take care of it." Among their cleaning services are screen enclosures, patios, pavers, driveways, walkways, sidewalks, lanais, curbs and gutters. Anything on the exterior of your house, H2O-Pros has you covered.

KEEPING YOUR DOG MENTALLY STIMULATED DURING THE SUMMER HEAT

EXPERT CONTRIBUTOR

Summertime usually means “fun in the sun”. However, while spending time outdoors can be healthy for you and your dog, it can also be extremely dangerous. Just as humans can suffer from heat stroke or exhaustion when we spend too much time in the heat, our dogs can also develop those same conditions. That’s why it is very important to have some fun indoor activities to keep your dog mentally stimulated, even on those hot summer days.

Often times, we think of our pets as having human tendencies, a term known as anthropomorphism. Have you ever thought to yourself, “If I were my dog, I would want...”? It’s important to understand that innate abilities of our dogs as well as the learned behaviors and the differences between the two. Most dogs have specific traits manifested within them and, of course, some have more strong ones than others.

Interestingly, it’s easier to tone down a dog’s motivation than it is to build it up. For example, if a dog never shows interest in playing with a ball, it would be difficult to increase that desire. On the other hand, if they were to get excessively excited when presented with a ball, teaching them to “tone down” their enthusiasm would be a far easier task.

Learned behaviors are behaviors that are learned inadvertently. For example, gestures we do such as going to the counter where the treats are, that invoke their attention. When our dog sits and waits for us to give them a treat, we can see that this behavior was created by our own actions. Though these behaviors are learned through experience, this doesn’t always equate solely to formal training. Innate behaviors, on the other hand, are genetically hardwired into our dog.

When it comes to playing games with our dog, we must first determine their abilities.

MAN’S BEST FRIEND

Our most popular and reputable program. Man’s Best Friend is tailored, focused and designed to modify unwanted behavior, such as jumping, play biting, pulling, lunging at dogs, and coming when called.

HEADSTART

Designed to provide basic obedience training. Although not intended for behavior modification, it does create a solid foundation of basic manners. Covers housebreaking and socialization.

Don’t forget about our indoor kennel condos! Perfect for dog staycations while you vacation!

How long can they stay entertained by that particular game? We never want to push the dog to the point of leaving the game on their own. If their attention span lasts only two minutes, limit the game to a minute and a half.

Games you can play inside your home:

HIDE & SEEK

The most important thing to remember with these types of games is to incorporate obedience into them. Using a high-value item (toy, treat, ball), walk over to your sofa and leave the treat on top. Tell your dog to find it. You can even make this more complex by touching multiple spots on the sofa but only leaving the treat in one place. Another variation of this is the "shell game". Using a tupperware container or cardboard box, put a hole in the top where you can place a treat inside and then shuffle the container while your dog watches you. Let them determine which box has the treat, and reward them when they do!

CUP & STRING PROCESS GAME

In other words, a self-created Pez dispenser! Cut a whole in the bottom of a cup and place a string through it. Tie the string between two chairs and, while your dog is watching, drop a scoop of food or a couple of treats into the cup. The idea is for your dog to nudge the cup to get the food out. A more complicated version would be to use a 2-liter bottle and a stick.

SCENTWORX JR.

Everything you need to teach your dog how to find ANY scent! We have tried this kit on several dogs who were able to detect odors just like K9 Police dogs within only three weeks.
